DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY
Job Posting – Course Instructor Position
Winter Term 2023

Posted on October 7, 2022
The Department of History is seeking 1 Course Instructor for the following course:

HIS444H1S: Topics in Jewish History: War, Genocide, and Occupation: Jewish Experience and the Military History of WWII
This fourth-year seminar aims to introduce students to the discipline of military history and explore its multifaceted relationship with Holocaust history. Jews were not only victims of genocide – this course will examine the roles and experiences of Jewish men and women who served in the Allied armies both during the war and during the occupation. This course will show how understanding the military history of the Second World War is crucial to understanding the progression, implementation, and memory of the Holocaust. A key focus will be how military service affected Jewish communities and Jewish identities all over the world and how genocide related to Axis and Allied war planning at different stages of the war. Students will develop an original research project using primary and secondary sources.
