

STUDENTS, SODOMY, AND THE STATE: LGBT Campus Struggles in the 1970s

Thursday, April 5th, 2018, 5:00 pm – 7:00 pm

Marc Stein

Professor of History, San Francisco State University

In this lecture, historian Marc Stein examines the litigation that occurred in the 1970s after more than a dozen public colleges and universities in the United States denied official recognition to LGBT student groups. Stein, a specialist in the history of sexuality, social movements, and constitutional law, focuses on the ways in which these educational institutions used state sodomy laws and the criminalization of sex to justify their ultimately unsuccessful attempts to suppress LGBT student organizing.

Munk School of Global Affairs

1 Devonshire Place, Room 208N North House

Registration is required.

For additional information and to register, please visit:

<https://munkschool.utoronto.ca/csus/event/24930/>

This event is co-sponsored by the Centre for the Study of the United States at Munk School of Global Affairs, the Department of History, the Faculty of Law, and the Mark S. Bonham Centre for Sexual Diversity Studies at the University of Toronto.